

Cardinals on the Bubble

Written by Donnie Ezell
Friday, 26 February 2010 01:00

HOPKINS COUNTY, KY - After a 10-point loss to Georgetown earlier this week the Louisville Cardinals could be in danger of missing the NCAA Tournament.

It has been a very up and down year for Rick Pitino's team, but they still have a legitimate shot at getting an at large bid if they do not falter down the stretch. On Sunday they have a date with a very hot Connecticut team that is on the bubble themselves, which makes for an intriguing matchup between the two teams. Both teams are very athletic, as well as, very well coached. It could be a big win for Louisville if they can go into Hartford and get the job done.

Each of these two teams has to have this win to improve their resume and improve their chances of making the NCAA Tournament.

Article provided to iSurf by Donnie Ezell.
Posted by Karen Klay Orange - iSurf News